

Abstract of the Disclosure

An air turbine apparatus is suitable for use as the intake or exhaust of a combustion engine. A housing defines an expansion chamber that communicates with an inlet and outlet. A tube is disposed proximate to the inlet and includes a plurality of perforations to encourage air flow from the expansion chamber to an induction chamber within the tube.